

Purchasing Environmentally Preferable Products (EPPs)

What are Environmentally Preferable Products (EPPs)?

EPPs are defined as items that have a reduced effect on human health and the environment when compared with competing products or services that serve the same purpose. EPPs may include, products that contain recycled content, minimize waste, conserve energy or water, protect natural resources, and reduce the use and release of toxic chemicals. EPPs also offer human health and economic benefits such as reduced worker illness, improvements in public health and decreased costs associated with waste management and regulatory compliance.

Why should my business buy EPPs?

An increasing number of businesses, government agencies and households are purchasing environmentally preferable products and services to protect their health and provide a safer, less toxic workplace, potentially reduce the amount of regulation they are subjected to, reduce liabilities, and protect the environment. Customers may also consider it a "plus" when choosing where they spend their money.

What types of EPP products or services are available?

Due to consumer demand, there are a growing number of products and services that have environmental benefits without sacrificing high performance or cost competitiveness. A list of suppliers is included with this fact sheet. Please note that the list in not comprehensive and does not constitute an endorsement by the State of Connecticut. You can also ask your suppliers or check the Internet for additional products.

Best Management Practices

- ★ Purchase the largest practical container, but don't purchase more than you need. Purchase frequently used products in bulk (e.g., oil, antifreeze) to reduce packaging waste.
- ★ Purchase the least toxic product available. Check the Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS) for products you purchase. If the product is toxic, ask your supplier for alternatives.
- ★ If you do have excess or unneeded materials, see if your supplier can take them back.
- ★ Include the cost of disposal when you make purchasing decisions. What looks like the cheaper option may cost more because of disposal or other management costs.
- ★ Store materials in a way that keeps them from being damaged.
- ★ Use the oldest items first (first-in, first-out).
- ★ Purchase products made with recycled content to close the recycling loop (i.e., create a market for the products you recycle). The quality of these products is just as good as those made with virgin materials and prices are competitive.
